Georgetown(Mass.). Deplores the neglect of the cause in "these degenerate times," mentioning "the paralyzing effects of New Organization, pro-slavery opposition, and the Harrison mania." Asks what the addressee thinks of the "great Bunker Hill scrape," which the writer compares to an "East Indian juggernaut festival." It will not be possible for the writer to take a table at the fair because she has a young family and an aged mother living with her. Reports on what may be expected of the local society.

Georgetown, Mass., The writer thanks the addressee for a communication, says her society is still in its formative stages, and cannot meet often because the members live far apart. The society's next meeting will be at the house of Nathan Webster in Haverhill. Discusses the addressee's plan to publish some Anti-Slavery tales. Will consult her society about it. Invites the addressee to a meeting of her society. A Miss Ball visited the writer but was not well received. Garrison lectured in Georgetown last summer. The writer praised his knowledge of the Scriptures.

Bangor, (Me.). Has been waiting for his brother to return from the South. Is preparing an address on "the liberty which belongs to the children of God. I have endeavored to show that the nominal church and the institution of human governments stand directly in the way of this liberty." Favors "abolition of the anti-Christian church, and all other anti-Christian institutions ..." E. P. delivered his address to a small audience in Bangor recently. Notes that very few Abolitionists regard human governments as obstacles to freedom.

Putney, Vt.. Came from Bangor, Me. to Putney, Vt. where he is spending a few days "with Brother Noyes' family connections." Few individuals seem "to be in any tolerable degree prepared to receive the whole truth." E. P. is glad that so much Gospel truth is printed in the Liberator. Thinks that a majority of New Englanders are Abolitionists, who "have little or no moral feeling with regard to it." The real Abolitionists are the true followers of W.L.G. Will go to New York. Suggests two recent issues of the Liberator be sent to John H. Noyes. Asks if W.L.G. has seen The Witness, a paper started recently by J. H. [redacted]

Does not favor a notice of them for the New Englander, nor does hi believe that the writings should occupy too large a place in the proposed memoir. «Boston» The writer will give pecuniary aid to the publication of the Liberty Bell. Quotes at length some remarks made by Henry Clay a few years ago, expressing the idea that "no state, no part of the country could be dishonored without affecting more or less the whole," and also calls attention to Clay's status as a slaveholder.

«Cavendish» The writer tells of her disappointment at not being able to see the leaders of the Anti-Slavery movement at the convention in New York. Having decided to attend and having started on her journey, she found on reaching the Connecticut River that the bridge had been swept away by a freshet, and was obliged to give up her enterprise. Expresses her Anti-Slavery convictions and her loyalty to the Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society and the Boston Female Society. Clerical policy is responsible for the husning up of local Anti-Slavery feeling. Non-Resistance meets with opposition, but is taking "deep root in hearts." Wishes Henry C. Wright could speak at Cavendish.
